Australia's Tropical Rainforests

Australia's Tropical Rainforests are the oldest continually surviving Tropical Rainforests on earth, and have been internationally recognised as one of the most ecologically fascinating natural areas in the world. To protect and preserve these rainforests they were inscribed on the World Heritage List in 1988. To qualify for World Heritage status, a site must fulfil at least one of the following criteria:

- 1. To be outstanding examples representing major stages of earth's history.
The rainforests of Tropical North Queensland are like a window on how the world once was;
- 2. To be outstanding examples representing significant ongoing ecological and biological processes.
The rainforest landscape contains clues as to how our world continues to evolve;
- 3. To contain superlative natural phenomena or areas of exceptional natural beauty and aesthetic importance.
Australia's Tropical Rainforests are a place of exceptional natural beauty;
- 4. To contain the most important and significant natural habitats for in-situ conservation of biological diversity.
Australia's Tropical Rainforests are home to many rare and endangered plants and animals.

Australia's Tropical Rainforests are one of the few places in the world to satisfy all criteria, further demonstrating the importance of these unique and exceptional environments. Collectively they form Australia's Wet Tropics World Heritage area comprising several national parks including Barron Gorge, the Daintree and Wooroonooran National Parks.

Barron Gorge National Park

Skyrail Rainforest Cableway operates in the Barron Gorge National Park which was established in 1940. Incorporating 2,820 hectares, the Barron Gorge National Park boasts rugged coastal mountains, steep ravines, the mighty Barron Falls, rich wildlife and Tropical Rainforests. It is considered to be one of Queensland's most picturesque national parks.
